VOLSTEAD STICKS BY GUNS IN HOUSE FIGHT ON DRY LAW

Comes to Defense When Member Calls Prohibition Only Farce.

Enforcement of prohibition by the Bureau of Internal Revenue was characterized as "a farce" in a speech on the floor of the House yesterday by William R. Wood, of Indiana, chairman of the subcommitee of the House Appropriations Committee, having jurisdiction over the sum to be expended for this

The speaker, "as a friend of prohibition," served notice on Andrew J. Volstead, of Minnesota, that un-less the House Judiciary Committee provided legislation for transferring the enforcement of the law to the Department of Justice, the House Appropriations Committee would take this action.

Asks Blame-Source.

"My chief purpose in having this work transferred to the Department of Justice is that it may be enforced." Wood said, "and that we may have some place where we may lodge the responsibility for its enforcement. You cannot lodge it now with the Internal Revone Brace. ith the Internal Revenue Bureau with the Internal Revenue Bureau, for it says, 'We are doing everything we can, and the Department of Justice is interfering with µs.' You cannot lodge it with the Department of Justice because it says 'Our responsibility is divided and we are hampered by those connected with the Internal Revenue Bureau.

he Internal Revenue Bureau.

Volstead, in replying, admitted that it was true that the law was not enforced in some localities, but he attributed this to the failure of n States to enact additional legis lation for the purpose of enforcing the law. In these States, he alleged, the "failure to enforce the law rests argely with State officials who have ciolated their oaths of office."

Says Agents Useless.

Wood alleged that the country vas honeycombed with prohibition enforcement agents who were use-less. He said that "it seems that the more money we appropriate for enforcement the less enforcement to women, and one other bill; 10:30; of Justice could enforce the law at half the present cost.
